21 ELLIS MIEYETTE

Lumsden's very own Ellis Mievette has been overlooked for much of his hockey journey — but he's quickly proving that persistence pays off.

The first-year Regina Pats forward went undrafted in the 2021 WHL Prospects Draft, forcing him to take the long road to the Western Hockey League. After years of steady improvement and determination, Mievette earned a spot on his hometown team out of training camp as a free agent invite, impressing coaches with his relentless work ethic, 200-foot game, and never-quit attitude.

Mievette first caught the Pats' attention during the 2024-25 season with the Drumheller Dragons of the AJHL, where he emerged as one of the league's top rookies. The skilled playmaker finished with 51 points (12G-39A) in 48 games, showcasing his vision and hockey sense at both ends of the ice.

Before his success in junior A, Mievette spent the 2023-24 season with the Regina Pat Canadians, tallying 51 points (17G-34A) in 44 games, along with 10 points (2G-8A) in 10 playoff appearances. His path wasn't without setbacks — he was cut from the Pat Canadians program at both 15 and 16 years old — but instead of giving up, he used those moments as motivation to improve.

SCOUTING REPORT

The Kamloops Blazers enter the 2025-26 season looking to get back on track after missing the playoffs in each of the last two years.

From 2021 to 2023, the Blazers were among the league's elite, posting back-to-back 48-win seasons and earning the right to host the 2023 Memorial Cup. Despite a strong showing that year, the Club ultimately fell short of capturing the national title. Since then, Kamloops has undergone a rebuilding phase.

Last season, the Blazers finished second-last in the Western Conference with a 24-39-4-1 record and 53 points.

Like Regina, Kamloops boasts a storied history. The franchise has captured six WHL Championships — tied with Medicine Hat for the most all-time — and three Memorial Cup titles (1992, 1994, 1995), cementing its legacy as one of junior hockey's most successful organizations.

PLAYER TO WATCH

29 NATHAN BEHM

Kamloops Blazers forward Nathan Behm is coming off a breakout 2024-25 season that helped solidify his status as one of the WHL's top young power forwards — and earned him a selection by the Chicago Blackhawks in the third round (66th overall) of the 2025 NHL Draft.

The Calgary, Alta. product joined the Blazers full-time as a 16-year-old during the 2023-24 season after being taken 13th overall in the 2022 WHL Prospects Draft. He quickly made an impression with his blend of size, skill, and compete level, tallying 31 points (12G-19A) in 68 games to rank among the top rookie scorers in his age group.

Standing 6-foot-2 and 203 pounds, Behm took a major step forward last season, finishing with 31 goals and 66 points in 59 games to rank in the top two in team scoring.

Known for his strong skating stride, heavy shot, and ability to drive play off the rush, Behm has established himself as a reliable offensive threat and a key piece of the Blazers' forward group heading into the 2025-26 campaign.
