PLAYER PROFILE

35 MAREK SCHLENKER

Regina Pats goaltender Marek Schlenker has quickly established himself as a reliable presence between the pipes since arriving via trade from the Penticton Vees just ahead of the 2025-26 season.

The 19-year-old Okotoks, Alta., product has been asked to shoulder a heavy workload and he has responded with poise. Through 22 appearances, Schlenker owns a 7-9-3 record, along with a 3.77 goals-against average and an .889 save percentage. Despite facing one of the highest shot volumes in the league, he ranks 11th in total saves.

Recently, the 5-foot-10 netminder has elevated his play, posting a .919 save percentage over his last two outings, while recording a save percentage north of .900 in 10 games this season.

Beyond the numbers, Schlenker carries a meaningful connection to the franchise. He is a second-generation Regina Pat, following in the footsteps of his father Chris Schlenker, who captained the Pats from 2002-04 and now works as an NHL official. Wearing the Pats crest is more than just another stop in Marek's hockey journey—it's a continuation of a family legacy.

With consistency trending upward and confidence growing, Schlenker remains a key piece of the Pats' present and future in goal.

SCOUTING REPORT

MOOSE JAW WARRIORS

The Moose Jaw Warriors come to town to take on the Regina Pats for the fourth time this season, continuing a familiar divisional matchup. The Warriors are in the early stages of a rebuild, but there are signs of progress. One year removed from capturing the first WHL Championship in franchise history in 2024, Moose Jaw took a step back last season, finishing last in the league with a 15-45-6-2 record.

This year, the Warriors opened the 2025-26 campaign with a 13-17-3-1 record for 30 points, sitting seventh in the Eastern Conference, though they enter this matchup having gone 1-6-2 over their last nine games.

Offensively, Landen McFadden has enjoyed a breakout 2025-26 season, leading the Warriors with 34 points (14G-20A) in 33 games. With Washington Capitals first-round pick Lynden Lakovic sidelined for the season, Moose Jaw will lean heavily on McFadden, along with Pavel McKenzie, Ethan Semeniuk and Aiden Ziprick. The Warriors have also added Minnesota Wild prospect Chase Wutzke, acquired earlier this season from the Red Deer Rebels, to help bolster their lineup.

PLAYER TO WATCH

14 ETHAN SEMENIUK

Moose Jaw Warriors forward Ethan Semeniuk has developed into a reliable two-way presence in the WHL, blending steady offensive growth with the defensive responsibility that earned him a championship pedigree.

The Fort St. John, B.C. product is on pace for a career-high 57 points (17G-40A) in 65 games this season. Through 31 games, the 20-year-old has already recorded 27 points (8G-19A), showing a growing playmaking touch while remaining trusted in matchup situations.

Semeniuk's value was on full display during the 2023-24 season, when he helped guide the Warriors to a WHL Championship at just 18 years old. Acquired from the Vancouver Giants, he quickly carved out an important bottom-six shutdown role, contributing 24 points (8G-16A) in 50 regular-season games and adding seven points in 20 playoff games.

Now a veteran presence in the Warriors' lineup, Semeniuk continues to be counted on for his hockey IQ, work ethic, and versatility—traits that have allowed his offensive numbers to climb without sacrificing defensive detail.

Semeniuk also has a personal connection to Regina, as he is cousins with Regina Pats forward Caden Brown, adding another layer of familiarity whenever the two teams meet.
