PLAYER PROFILE

25 RUSLAN KARIMOV

Regina Pats forward Ruslan Karimov continues to trend upward as a key piece of the Blue Brigade's forward group, producing consistently while bringing a physical edge to his game.

The Almetievsk, Russia product has recorded eight points (4G-4A) over his last 10 games, including four points (3G-1A) in his last five outings.

Karimov joined the Pats earlier this season after being claimed off CHL Import Waivers from the Sarnia Sting (OHL). A former sixth overall selection in the 2024 CHL Import Draft, the 6-foot, 201-pound winger made an immediate impact in North America last season, tallying 29 points (15G-14A) as a 17-year-old rookie with Sarnia.

In his first campaign with Regina, Karimov has continued to develop his all-around game, compiling 21 points (9G-12A) in 31 games. He has added three power-play goals and fired 64 shots on net

Known as a physical, hard-working winger, Karimov anticipates plays well, supports his linemates, and is effective as a checker. He consistently wins puck battles, cuts inside quickly to create scoring chances, and is comfortable battling in front of the net, using his frame to carve out space in high-traffic areas.

SCOUTING REPORT

SWIFT CURRENT BRONCOS

The Swift Current Broncos arrive at the Brandt Centre on Wednesday looking to build momentum despite a challenging season to date. Swift Current enters the matchup following a hard-fought 3-2 overtime loss to the Red Deer Rebels on Saturday, a game that showcased the Broncos' compete level as they continue to search for consistency.

Currently sitting last in the WHL standings at 9-28-3-0 (21 points), the Broncos have endured their share of adversity this season. A 16-game losing streak tested the group's resilience before Swift Current snapped the skid on January 3 with an emphatic 7-4 win over the Lethbridge Hurricanes — their first victory since November 14 against Moose Jaw. Since that breakthrough, the Broncos are 1-2-1 over their last four games, scoring 13 goals while allowing 19.

For the Broncos, Zach Pantelakis, a former Regina Pat, leads the club with 21 points (11G-10A) in 39 games this season. Anthony Wilson, also a former Pat, has enjoyed a strong campaign of his own, posting a career-best 21 points (8G-13A) in 33 games.

Despite their position in the standings, Swift Current features notable NHL Draft-eligible talent. Three Broncos — Sawyer Dingman, Stephan Kuryachenkov, and Brendan Rudolph — have been ranked by NHL Central Scouting.

PLAYER TO WATCH

29 HUDSON DARBY

For Swift Current Broncos captain Hudson Darby, wearing the “C” carries a deeper meaning than most. The Swift Current native is finally living out a childhood dream — not only playing for his hometown team, but leading it — and his impact has been evident both on and off the ice this season.

Now 19, Darby is enjoying a strong campaign in his first season as captain, producing 22 points (9G-13A) in 35 games. He has elevated his play as of late, collecting five points (2G-3A) over his last five games and seven points (2G-5A) across his last 10 contests, Darby’s WHL journey has taken a unique path. Last season, he spent time with the Portland Winterhawks, where he had the opportunity to play alongside his younger brother, Griffin. The siblings helped guide Portland to the WHL Western Conference Final before falling to the Spokane Chiefs. During that run, Darby recorded 20 points (7G-13A) in 60 games, gaining valuable playoff experience that continues to shape his game today.

Standing 6-foot-2 and weighing 183 pounds, Darby brings a strong two-way presence down the middle, combining size, responsibility, and maturity beyond his years. He was originally selected by the Winterhawks in the fifth round of the 2021 WHL Prospects Draft, and those early developmental years have helped mold him into the leader he is now in Swift Current.
