PLAYER PROFILE

23 AIDEN WAGNER

Regina Pats defenceman Aiden Wagner is making the most of his rookie season in the Western Hockey League, steadily growing his game while earning valuable minutes on the Pats' blue line.

The 16-year-old has recorded four points (2G-2A) in 21 games this season, showing poise beyond his years as he adjusts to the pace and physicality of the WHL. Wagner's journey with the Pats began earlier this season when he joined the Club as an affiliate player after posting four points (2G-2A) in six games with the Saskatoon Blazers U18 AAA. His strong play and maturity quickly caught the coaching staff's attention, leading to a full-time signing for the remainder of the season.

A native of Yorkton, Saskatchewan, Wagner was selected by the Pats in the second round of the 2024 WHL Prospects Draft. He played a key role with the Blazers as a 15-year-old last season, contributing 17 points (3G-14A) in 36 games while logging important minutes in all situations.

Before his time in Saskatchewan, Wagner enjoyed a standout campaign with Northern Alberta Xtreme U15 Prep, where he totaled 23 points (4G-19A) in 22 games, establishing himself as a reliable, puck-moving defenceman with strong hockey sense.

SCOUTING REPORT

VICTORIA ROYALS

The Victoria Royals continue their push through the WHL schedule as they play the second game of a six-game Eastern Division road trip, with additional stops still to come in Prince Albert, Saskatoon, and Moose Jaw.

The Royals enter the contest with a 17-14-5-3 record (42 points), which currently places them eighth in the Western Conference. With 28 games remaining, the Royals are firmly in the thick of the playoff race, sitting two points ahead of Spokane while also two points back of sixth place, making every game on this road swing critical.

The Royals have posted a 3-3 record in January, scoring 13 goals and allowing 18 over their last six games.

Special teams have played a key role in Victoria's steady results, as they boast the seventh-best penalty kill in the WHL (79.8%) and the 13th-ranked power play at 23.4%.

Last season, Victoria established itself as a contender, finishing 40-17-4-7 with 91 points, first in the B.C. Division and second in the Western Conference. The Royals carried that success into the postseason, dispatching the Tri-City Americans in five games during the opening round before falling in six games to the Spokane Chiefs in round two.

PLAYER TO WATCH

93 ROAN WOODWARD

Roan Woodward has emerged as a key offensive driver for the Victoria Royals in his overage season, delivering a career year and providing veteran leadership to a Club battling for playoff position.

The Nipawin, Saskatchewan product is on pace to set new personal bests with a projected 70-point season (40G-30A), showcasing a goal-scoring touch and offensive confidence that has elevated Victoria's forward group. Acquired by the Royals from the Edmonton Oil Kings during the offseason, Woodward has quickly found his stride in a new environment, posting 40 points (23G-17A) in 40 games with Victoria.

The 5-foot-10, 179-pound left-shot forward brings pace, competitiveness, and a shoot-first mentality, making him a consistent threat at five-on-five and on special teams. His production this season already surpasses last year's output on a per-game basis, after recording 53 points (22G-31A) in 68 games with Edmonton during the 2024-25 campaign.

Woodward began his WHL career with the Everett Silvertips before being traded to the Oil Kings, where he played a pivotal role in helping Edmonton return to the postseason for the first time since 2021-22. Last spring, he and the Oil Kings pushed the Prince Albert Raiders to seven games in a hard-fought first-round series, experience that has translated into his mature, composed play this season.
