PLAYER PROFILE

13 LIAM PUE

Liam Pue is making the most of his underage season—and his 16th birthday was no exception.

The skilled 6-foot-2, 169-pound forward celebrated turning 16 with a milestone moment on Monday, burying his sixth goal of the season with the Regina Pats. That tally pushed Pue to 15 points (6G-9A) in 27 games, an impressive pace for one of the youngest players in the WHL. He's also trending upward, recording points in four of his last five league outings.

While continuing to earn valuable minutes at the major junior level, Pue has been dominant in U18 AAA action with the Regina Pat Canadians. The Langley, B.C. product has piled up 48 points (16G-32A) in just 21 games, ranking second in the SMAAAHL in points per game (2.29) behind teammate Maddox Schultz (2.86) in the SMAAAHL.

On the international stage, he helped Team Canada White capture a silver medal at the U17 World Hockey Challenge, contributing eight points (4G-4A) in five games. He also shined at the Circle K Classic, earning First Team All-Star honours after erupting for 13 points (7G-6A) in five games.

SCOUTING REPORT

PENTICTON VEES

The Penticton Vees are set to make history as they roll into the Brandt Centre for the first time in franchise history, continuing what has been a remarkable debut season in the Western Hockey League.

After a highly successful run in the British Columbia Hockey League, Penticton officially joined the WHL as its 23rd franchise this past offseason. Rather than enduring the typical growing pains of an expansion club, the Vees have raised the bar, compiling the best record ever by a WHL expansion team in its inaugural season. Through 54 games, Penticton sits at 35-12-4-4, good for 78 points, first place in the BC Division and second overall in the Western Conference.

The Vees' success has been driven by a mature, experienced roster built to compete immediately. Penticton features 12 players with NCAA commitments. The Vees carry an average age of 18.92, with 13 nineteen-year-olds and four 20-year-olds, making them one of the WHL's oldest and most physically prepared teams.

Offensively, the attack is led by Jacob Kvasnicka, a New York Islanders prospect who tops the Vees' scoring chart with 72 points this season.

The Vees also bring a distinctly American flavor to the lineup, featuring eight U.S.-born players, among the highest totals in the league.

PLAYER TO WATCH

83 JACOB KVASNICKA

Jacob Kvasnicka has quickly established himself as a cornerstone of the Penticton Veeps lineup, playing a pivotal role in the club's inaugural season in the Western Hockey League.

The Burnsville, Minnesota product has been one of the WHL's most dynamic offensive threats in 2025-26. Kvasnicka currently sits seventh in league scoring and is tied for fourth in goals, piling up 72 points (33G-39A) in 53 games. His impact extends beyond even-strength play, as he leads the entire league with four shorthanded goals.

Among all WHL rookies, the 5-foot-11, 170-pound right-shot forward ranks second in both scoring and goals, trailing only Kamloops Blazers forward JP Hurlbert.

Committed to the University of Minnesota, Kvasnicka brings a strong development pedigree to Penticton. Last season, he suited up for the U.S. National U18 Team, recording 39 points (18G-21A) in 66 games against elite competition. His progression was further recognized when he was selected by the New York Islanders in the seventh round (202nd overall) of the 2025 NHL Draft.
