PLAYER PROFILE

57 ZACH LANSARD

It's been a big year for Zach Lansard, and it's starting to show on the draft boards.

The Regina Pats forward checked in at No. 62 in TSN's latest rankings from Craig Button, putting him in the mix as a potential second-round pick in the 2025 NHL Draft. That's a nice jump from January, when NHL Central Scouting had him ranked 72nd among North American skaters.

The rise comes after a strong season where Lansard really found his game. The 17-year-old suited up in all 68 games, the only Pats player to do it, and finished with a career-high 56 points (24 goals, 32 assists).

It's a big step forward from his rookie year. As a 16-year-old, Lansard put up 19 points (7G-12A) in 54 games and earned Rookie of the Year honours with the Pats.

He also got a chance to showcase his game on a bigger stage at the 2025 WHL Top Prospects Game in Langley, another key moment in his draft year.

SCOUTING REPORT

MEDICINE HAT TIGERS

This marks the seventh all-time postseason meeting between the two Clubs, and the first since 2007 when Medicine Hat swept Regina in round two. Their playoff history stretches back over four decades, beginning in 1980 when the Pats claimed the series in five games. With both franchises rich in WHL tradition, this latest chapter adds another layer to an already familiar matchup.

The Tigers enter the series as one of the league's premier teams, and the defending WHL champions.

Medicine Hat put together a dominant playoff run in 2025, going 16-2 en route to their sixth title in franchise history, capped off by a five-game victory over the Spokane Chiefs. Their season didn't end there, as they advanced all the way to the Memorial Cup Final before ultimately falling to the London Knights.

That championship pedigree has carried into this season. The Tigers finished second in the Eastern Conference with an impressive 50-10-5-3 record (108 points), securing their second straight Central Division title. Their 50-win campaign marked the organization's best season since 2006-07 and their first time hitting the 50-win plateau since 2016-17.

PLAYER TO WATCH

39 NOAH DAVIDSON

Noah Davidson didn't take long to make his mark in the WHL. The 17-year-old Medicine Hat Tigers rookie finished fourth among all first-year players in goals, putting up 52 points (30G, 22A) in 67 games. His strong debut also ranked third on the Tigers in scoring and earned him the club's Rookie of the Year honours.

The Irvine, California product brings an impressive mix of size and skill at 6-foot-3, 217 pounds. Davidson uses his frame well to protect pucks and generate chances around the net, while showing a natural scoring touch. His success comes as no surprise after a dominant season at Shattuck-St. Mary's 18U Prep, where he tallied 72 points (40G, 32A) in 58 games.

Committed to Boston College, Davidson is still a year away from NHL Draft eligibility in 2027 due to his late birthday. With his rookie season now under his belt, he's already emerging as a key piece for the Tigers and a name to watch moving forward.
